

Leading Multiethnic Picture Provider PhotoEdit Inc. Teams Up With NativeStock Photographer

Two stock photography companies concerned with providing a diverse range of multiethnic imagery have joined forces to increase distribution and visibility.

PhotoEdit Inc., www.photoeditinc.com, a leading provider of multiethnic and multicultural stock photos based in Orange County, California, is proud to welcome photographer Marilyn "Angel" Wynn to the team. Involved with cameras since the age of 13, Angel has experience in a diverse range of fields, from photography at an underground newspaper to documentary filmmaking and more.

Additionally, Angel owns NativeStock Pictures (www.nativestock.com), a stock photo website specializing in positive, eclectic Native American imagery. Having grown up around many Native American children and families on Vancouver Island, British Columbia, Angel later survived a battle with cancer and thereafter dedicated her life to pursuing the goal of photographing American Indian tribes.

"My extraordinary career involves photographing Native Americans while traveling through remnants of Indian Country scattered across the United States and Canada," says Angel Wynn of NativeStock Pictures. "Meeting genuine traditional people, I learn specifics of each tribe's unique culture while touring pristine landscapes that have remained untouched throughout history. Any fees earned are shared 50/50 with my Native models, as I feel that we are partners in creating these awe-inspiring images. Through the selling of stock images, I support several worthy Native American programs and foundations on a variety of reservations as a way to honor their ancestors."

PhotoEdit is proud to offer select NativeStock images from Angel, available individually here:
